

short written summary describtion:

In this lab, I used an Excel dataset that contains different features related to house prices, such as location, size, and number of rooms. I applied Machine Learning techniques to build a regression model that predicts house prices based on these factors. The dataset was cleaned and analyzed before training the model to improve accuracy. This lab helped me understand how data can be used to make reliable predictions.